Signature Programs

Students participating in any of the three Scholars programs graduate with honors distinction. All programs culminate in a presentation of students’ year-long research projects at an annual Scholars Symposium.

CLASSICAL SCHOLARS
Participants undertake an enriched study of classical humanities, intensive Greek, and AP Latin. A senior-year research project completes the curriculum. Example of a recent topic: Sexuality, Gender, and Female Agency in Medea (winner of the 2019 Cum Laude Society National Award).

GLOBAL SCHOLARS
Seniors selected as Global Scholars complete an in-depth analysis of a global issue, extensive language study, and an interdisciplinary capstone project. Example of a recent topic: Genetically Modified Food: The Quest for Successful Crop Cultivation With a Global Food Crisis on the Horizon.

STEM SCHOLARS
The STEM curriculum includes the study of science, technology, engineering, and mathematics. Students complete a set of core courses and a year-long research project in an approved field of study. Example of a recent topic: Engineering a Sanitation Solution for the Guatemala City Dump.

INDEPENDENT RESEARCH PROJECTS
Working one-on-one with a faculty advisor, students may pursue a semester-long or year-long independent study, culminating in a final presentation. Example of a recent topic: Video Game Production.
